

Little John's Song

When you lose a friend to death
And he's heaved his final breath
You take breath and you cry
But do not kiss the world goodbye.
Live your life, the world goes on,
The sun still shines where it once shone.
Seize the day, and then you may
Find that happiness can stay.
All the same, when you lose such a prince among men
None of it can ever, no, won't ever be the same again.
